1. Two rows of planes of approximately 15 and 11 each were parked in the northern and western sections of the airfield, respectively. The exact type of the planes could not be established but they were not of a commercial type. A row of several hangars is located in the northern part of the airfield.
2. Sixteen aircraft revetments were under construction in the southern part of the airfield to the west of the road connecting Oyenhäusen and Günselsdorf. A number of enlisted men were working there, and trucks were observed transporting material. Eight additional aircraft revetments have already been completed and were camouflaged with sod.
3. A radio station is located west of the road near the southern entrance into Oyenhäusen. It consists of four antenna masts ten and a half feet high, and a small cabin built in the center which appears to provide shelter for an automatic instrument. (See attached sketch.)
